BACKGROUND

The Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA) was passed by Congress and signed into law by President George W. Bush in 2003 to prevent, detect and respond to sexual abuse that occurs in confinement settings, including juvenile correctional programs. The National Prison Rape Elimination Commission developed national standards for reducing prison rape. These standards became final on June 20, 2012 when they were published in the Federal Register by the Department of Justice (DOJ). PREA applies to adult prisons and jails, juvenile confinement facilities, lockups and community confinement facilities. Juvenile facilities, whether a locked secure facility or a community-based facility, are required to meet the same Juvenile Facility Standards.

DATA COLLECTION AND CONSISTENCY

The Department is required to complete the annual Survey of Sexual Victimization administered by the Census Bureau of the US Department of Commerce on behalf of the Bureau of Justice Statistics of the US Department of Justice. Instructions and the annual survey format are usually issued by the Census Bureau in July of the year following the reporting year (e.g., instructions/survey format for Calendar Year 2017 are issued usually in July 2018 with a deadline of the end of September) with a deadline of the end of September. For Calendar Year 2017, these instructions were not issued until November 2018 with a deadline of January 18, 2019.

In order to ensure consistency of reporting sexual victimization data as required PREA Juvenile Standard 115.387, the Department uses the annual Survey of Sexual Victimization as the annual data collection tool for PREA. Since that data is reported on a calendar year basis for a previous calendar year, the annual report is always focused on that previous calendar year's data. Since the Census Bureau released the 2017 Calendar Year instructions four months late, our development of our Calendar Year

In 2017, Rhode Island had two (2) facilities required to meet the PREA Standards for Juvenile Facilities. One of these is the Thomas C. Slater Training School for Youth, the State's only publicly operated commitment program for both detained and adjudicated male and female youth. While previously this was located in two buildings, it is now located in one building. The Thomas C. Slater Training School for Youth (RITS) is the State's only locked, secure residential program for both adjudicated and pre-adjudicated male and female youth. The RITS is organized into four Mods each with the capacity to hold up to 24 youth: B Mod, Adjudicated Males; C Mod, Pre-

Adjudicated (Detained) and Adjudicated Females; D Mod, Adjudicated Males; and F Mod, Pre-Adjudicated (Detained) Males. While the total capacity is 96 youth, the actual number of resident's averages about 55 youth daily.

The Rhode Island Training School Consent Decree that was placed under a federal court assistant decree that was originally entered in 1973. The Consent Decree was entered on behalf of a plaintiff class comprised of youth confined and committed to the Training School. In 2000, the terms of the Consent Decree were amended to include a provision that the State would establish "substantial compliance" with the terms of the Consent Decree as follows:

1. The construction of a new facility;
2. The revision of Training School policy and protocol;
3. The implementation of a resident grievance process; and
4. Achieving accreditation through the American Correctional Association.

Subsequent to 2000, the State of Rhode Island successfully completed three of the four requirements needed to achieve "substantial compliance." The State opened a new facility in 2009 and completed a review and revision of all facility policy by the end of 2010. In addition, the State established and implemented a grievance procedure for the youth at the facility. Thereafter, in 2014, the attorneys for the plaintiffs and the State agreed to amend the Consent Decree to require the State to achieve "substantial compliance" with the standards published through the Juvenile Detention Initiative as the final requirement to satisfy the terms of the Consent Decree. The amendment to the Consent Decree substituted for compliance with the best practice standards of the Juvenile Detention Alternative Initiative Standards for the previous requirement of achieving ACA accreditation. The State submitted to an audit of the facility under the JDAI standards of the facility in 2014 and 2015. To date, the State has successfully achieved compliance with most of the JDAI standards. The Thomas C. Slater Training School was deemed to be "substantially compliant" with JDAI standards in April 2017 and the federal court granted the request to dismiss the federal consent decree in June of 2017.

Ocean Tides, Inc. is a privately-operated staff secure program licensed by the Department of Children, Youth and Families (DCYF). Ocean Tides provides comprehensive residential treatment and educational services to youth adjudicated to the Training School, but who are ordered to these programs on a Temporary Community Placement (TCP) status by the Rhode Island Family Court. If the youth does not abide by the terms of the placement, the youth can be returned to the Training School without the need for the Court to issue a new placement order. Ocean Tides provides a separate annual report for PREA.

AGENCY AND FACILITY LEADERSHIP

Effective implementation of PREA and ensuring environments free of sexual abuse and sexual harassment is contingent on strong agency and facility leadership as well as the development of strong policies and practices that reinforce the prevention of sexual abuse and sexual harassment. Under the leadership of Director Trista Piccola, Rhode Island continues our strong track record of ensuring safe facilities for detained and adjudicated youth in juvenile corrections facilities. Director Piccola has focused on improving facility level leadership capacity through the hiring of a new Executive Director of Juvenile Corrections, Larome Myrick, and the promotion of a long-time, well respected Training School Administrator to the position of Superintendent, Brian Terry. Additionally, she has entrusted the overall management of Juvenile Correctional Services in our Executive Counsel, Kevin Aucoin. Mr. Aucoin has a long track record of leading reform and efforts within the Training School and in the past has served as Acting Superintendent.

In June 2010, then DCYF Director Patricia Martinez, then Acting Superintendent Kevin Aucoin (now DCYF Executive Counsel) and then Associate Director for Child Protection/Child Welfare Stephanie Terry presented as witnesses to the Review Panel on Prison Rape's Hearings on Sexual Victimization in Juvenile Correctional Facilities before the DOJ's Review Panel on Prison Rape. Rhode Island was invited to attend as an "Institution with the Lowest Prevalence of Sexual Victimization"<sup>1</sup>.

According to this report, the Panel relied on data from the Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) published report, Sexual Victimization in Juvenile Facilities Reported by Youth, 2009-09.<sup>2</sup> This report identified that during the data collection time period, the Rhode Island Training School for Youth had one reported juvenile on juvenile sexual encounter which was investigated and unfounded. Director Martinez suggested three key factors that contributes to this "low prevalence of sexual victimization at the RITS: (1) the training program for staff; (2) the assessment procedures for youth, and (3) transition planning."<sup>3</sup> Mr. Aucoin's testimony provided more concrete details of each of those factors.<sup>4</sup>

Due to the ongoing Department's ongoing collaboration with other private agencies and the Family Court, we have successfully continued to reduce the number of youth that are detained and adjudicated with the training school. As the number of males has decreased by 22% and the number of females has decreased by 50% between 2016 and 2017.

Similarly, Ocean Tides stresses the importance of effective staff training, sound youth assessments, and transition planning within their program's culture. Ocean Tides is a long-standing residential treatment facility in Rhode Island and enjoys an excellent reputation for providing safe and effective treatment and educational services to the youth in their care.

Both facilities began their initial PREA Audit for Juvenile Facilities in late 2015 with the onsite phase of the audits held in May 2016 and the preliminary report provided to the facilities in early June 2016. Corrective Action plans for each facility were initiated in late June 2016 and completed in early December 2016. The Final Reports issued in January 2017 indicated full compliance with PREA.

Due to a misinterpretation by the department regarding the required time frames in audit cycle 2, the department did not achieve compliance in the first 2 years of audit cycle 2. The department will meet the compliance requirements prior to August 20, 2019.

DCYF SPAN OF AUTHORITY

DCYF is the state agency designated as responsible for child welfare services (including child protective services), juvenile justice services, and children's behavioral health services. Under this authority, the services we provide the state include the operations of the Thomas C. Slater Training School for Youth. We are also the regulatory agency responsible for the licensing of residential services for children, youth, and foster homes.

This unique structure has allowed us to ensure that all Divisions, including Juvenile Correctional Services, are keenly aware of the importance of ensuring that the environments in which children and youth are placed have a zero tolerance for sexual harassment and sexual abuse. Staff, contractors, volunteers, and youth are continuously informed and educated about the importance of sharing information of suspected incidents of sexual harassment and abuse, how to know the signs of potential situations where this could arise and how to report suspicions or incidents.

ANNUAL REPORTS ON SEXUAL HARASSMENT AND SEXUAL

The Department submits the annual Survey of Sexual Victimization for the Thomas C. Slater Training School only. Since the other two facilities are privately operated, they submit these reports only when included in the random sample of private facilities. The Department has submitted Surveys for Calendar Years 2012 - 2017.

CALENDAR YEARS 2017

With the exception of Calendar Years 2015 and 2016, there were no reports of incidents of sexual harassment or sexual assault of Training School residents by other youth or by staff, contractors, or volunteers. In CY 2015, there was one report of sexual harassment of a resident by a staff member. This report was investigated as a report of sexual abuse and was determined to be unfounded. The reports in 2016 and 2017, both allegations of staff on staff sexual abuse, were unfounded.

Over the past several years, the Department has been working with the Annie E. Casey Foundation's Juvenile Detention Alternatives Initiative and the Center for Children's Law and Policy to help address issues of over-reliance on incarcerating youth. This has provided us with additional resources focused on improving our policies and practices across the facility, including ensuring that our environment is one that is focused on ensuring youth safety. Staff, contractors and volunteers have gone through hundreds of hours of training in areas including crisis intervention and support, detecting and addressing sexual abuse and harassment, and engaging positively and effectively with youth. Additionally, as a part of our PREA compliance efforts, we have used Juvenile Justice Block Grant funds to update policies and trainings related to sexual harassment and assault, developed posters and educational materials for staff and youth, and upgraded physical aspects of our facilities found to be in need of upgrading for safety reasons, such as adding cameras in some areas and putting alarms on doors that lead to any isolated areas.

As we move forward with ongoing PREA compliance, the Department continues to examine our policies and practices to ensure that we continue our successful record of zero-tolerance for sexual harassment and assault. While we do not contract with any agencies for a set number of juvenile justice beds, we contract for the delivery of educational services with Ocean Tides. Since this facility serves juvenile justice-involved youth almost exclusively, we work with them to ensure PREA compliance. We have included language in all of our residential vendor contracts that provides notice to the vendor that, should they be determined to be a PREA Covered Facility, then they will be required to ensure they meet PREA standards.

Rhode Island has a strong history of protecting children and youth in care from sexual assault and harassments in all facilities operated or licensed by DCYF. We have found the efforts to comply with PREA complementary to our efforts to maintain zero tolerance in these areas and look forward to continued success.
